WOMAN FOUND IN SNOW DIES OF EXPOSURE

Last Friday a passing motorist found a woman lying on the Lincoln Highway west of New Lenox. He notified the Sheriff's office in Joliet and the unconscious woman about 55 years old and poorly clad, was taken to the St. Joseph hospital in Joliet where she died Sunday night without regaining consciousness.

No money was found on her person and her identity was traced up through the finding of a name Edna Weldendorff, Toledo, Ohio, written on a piece of paper in her clothes. Several poems written in German were also found on her.

Chief Deputy Gordon Breen of the Will County Sheriff's office communicated with police authorities at Toledo and learned that the woman had stayed for several weeks in a Toledo shelter house in 1928. She had told officials that she had come to the United States from Germany at the age of 15 years, and that her parents were dead. It was established that the woman had no home and no friends.

When brought to the hospital she was suffering from long exposure to the cold which apparently paralyzed her entire left side.

She was buried in a pauper's grave in Elmhurst cemetery, Joliet, Tuesday afternoon.

The Tinley Park PTA observed Founders Night last Friday night with a special program. Lighting of candles in honor of the presidents was a feature of the program.

Special addresses were given by Mrs. Smyth of Blue Island and the Tinley Park school principal, Mr. Clinebell.

The musical part of the program was furnished by the local Mother's Chorus which was appreciated by all present and it is to be hoped that they will keep up the fine work begun. Thanks are especially extended to Fred Erickson for his interest in coaching the members of the chorus. In spite of the weather the teachers, most of whom reside out of town, were present.

Tinley People In Auto Accidents

Three automobile accidents involving Tinley Park people occurred last Saturday and Tuesday. Tony Bettenhausen ran into the rear of a truck on 171st street during the blinding snow storm Saturday evening. The Bettenhausen car was quite badly damaged but luckily no one was injured.

The same evening Henry Bechstein and Walter Brandau figured in a head-on collision on the same street but escaped injury. Both cars were damaged.

Tuesday evening about 7:30 o'clock Arthur Lucius of Tinley Park was quite badly hurt when the car he was driving was struck by another car at 159th and Cicero. According to Lucius there were four men in the car. After the crash three of them ran away. Lucius was taken by the highway police to the Harvey hospital for first aid and was later brought to his home in Tinley Park. His car was badly wrecked and it was said the car which had crashed into his car caught fire.

Second Sub Zero Spell Raises Havoc

The second sub-zero wave and a blinding snow swept this region on Saturday afternoon and night. Sunday was extremely cold. Snow plows after many hours of hard work kept all the paved highways open. Side roads however are badly drifted and some may not be in use until Spring.

Trains were delayed and through trains on the Rock Island were very late. The Rocky Mountain Limited east-bound was snow-bound in Iowa over Saturday, and Sunday and came through late Monday night.

Mail service was badly interrupted. Rural carriers made deliveries after the highways were opened.

Quite a number of rural churches dispensed with services and Sunday school last Sunday.

Highways have been very slippery and difficult to travel by the snow and sleet of yesterday (Thursday). Thus far the fuel situation has held up quite well and there does not appear to be a fuel shortage.

CAUGHT in the WILD

CHAPTER IX

—16—
Murder.

In the morning Garth for the first time showed haste. The dawn was far too beautifully rose. He made sure that Lilith's blankets were back in her cockpit before he handed her aboard. He fitted the glass wind cowl to the cockpit rim, which came up almost level with her eyes.

"If we strike into a blizzard, get your cap over your ears, and blanket yourself, head and all," he warned. "You don't want to lose your ears and nose."

The constable was already snug under his own cowl. Garth swung into his pilot cockpit. Old Tobin gave the propeller a spin for him.

This time Garth needed no circling in order to trace the air route. Aboard the cabin monoplane he had watched Huxby's instruments and noted the landmarks from above. He now knew the way in by air. He did not even have to follow the zigzag course that he had been forced to grope along in guiding Huxby. His mental map of all those turns, bearings and distances enabled him to draw a direct air line to the lost valley. He headed along it as straight as the crow flies.

By the time the lovely rose dawn glared into an angry red sunrise, the roaring plane had flown all the way across that weary desolation of muskegs and broken-ridged lower mountains. Close ahead loomed the last range in front of the Selwyns. The summits that had reared up so bare and brown under the summer sun now gleamed with a white mantle. The only dark spots were precipices too steep to hold the snow.

Thickening clouds foretold another storm. But Garth had outraced it. Instead of swinging in around the out-thrust mountain to the pass, he banked and drove past the east side of the mountain, on a long upslant.

A few miles north from the pass, he banked to the west and headed for the lowest notch in the jagged east-side wall of the valley. Above the great barrier the plane bumped like a boat in a choppy sea.

Garth paid no conscious heed to the rough passage. His hands and feet adjusted the controls with automatic precision, leaving his attention free to center upon what lay ahead.

His first glimpse into the valley showed him a column of smoke above the black belt of spruce at the far end of the lake. Much thicker and darker than ordinary camp-fire smoke, it stood out distinct against the vivid white of the snow-sheeted tundra slope.

As the plane drove clear above the saddle between the peaks, he shoved the stick forward and cut the gun. With the roar of the engine stilled, the plane swooped down at the lake like a monstrous bird of prey. Relatively speaking, it was driving at its quarry as noiselessly as a great horned owl of the North stoops to strike a rabbit. Also, by entering the valley over this distant saddle, instead of through the pass, Garth felt sure the plane would not be seen.

His next problem was to effect a landing without the roar of the restarted motor. He had already made out Huxby's big cabin plane, moored at the mouth of the glacier stream. That was the only safe mooring place.

The lake had already skimmed over with thin ice except where the out-rushing glacier torrent kept a water lane free, well out from shore. Huxby undoubtedly had been shrewd enough to foresee a freeze-up if he moored his plane below the foot of the glacier trough.

Absence of any smoke near the plane told that the miners were camped at the placer. The stream mouth was too far from the diggings for the hurried workers to tramp back and forth every night and morning. Besides, there would be snowdrifts to wade through.

From every indication, the claim-jumper could be surprised and taken before he realized that any other party than his own had come to the valley. The one need was to avoid using the plane's engine. Its roar would be heard for miles.

Garth calculated the volplane angle with his utmost skill. If he hit the water too soon, the propeller would have to be used to pull the plane in to the landing; if he held on too long, there might be a crackup.

It was a matter of fractions of seconds. He allowed for the fact that the slight wind was abeam. Instead of sucking down from the glacier. His one failure was to notice in time the shrunken volume of the glacier stream.

The plane took to the water smoothly, at almost the exact distance offshore that he had planned. The difficulty was that the outswirling current lacked the force he expected. Instead of slowing down or stopping short, the three-seater drove in hard at the cabin plane.

The stream mouth lacked width enough for the small plane to squeeze past the large one. Nor was there room to maneuver between the off-shore rocks. Garth acted with instant decision. He swerved the three-seater to clear the tail of the cabin plane. As he stripped off his goggles and swung down from his cockpit with the mooring line, the pontoon stems smashed like eggshells on a waterworn rock, across the narrow channel from the tail of the other plane.

Before the current could float the three-seater back into deep water, Garth leaped ashore. Lilith had opened the cowl of her cockpit and was starting to climb out. Garth glanced at the threatening sky.

"She has settled down hard and fast, Miss Ramill. Better stay snug aboard until we return."

The girl's reply was to scramble forward on the shoreward wing of the plane. Garth waded out in the icy water and had her hand down his rifle, the three pairs of snowshoes, and all the blankets. He tossed everything to Dillon, then took the girl on his shoulder.

The policeman had started upstream with the outfit. He walked across the now shallow ford without getting a drop of water over the tops of his heavily greased shoe-packs. Garth slung Lilith on his shoulder like a sack of meal and splashed across after Dillon.

At the far bank Dillon stopped to put on a pair of snowshoes. Garth lowered the girl upon a bare rock, and ran down the left bank to swing aboard the cabin plane. With him he took the blankets. When he came ashore, he had on dry socks and moccasins.

He frowned at Lilith. She was flopping awkwardly along on snowshoes behind the policeman.

"Take off those webs and get into the cabin," he ordered.

"I will not," she refused. "I'm going with you. I came to see that beast arrested."

"Don't be a fool. We'll be there and back before you've more than get started. There's no time to wait for you. Blizzard may swoop down any minute."

He had slipped on the third pair of snowshoes. He took his rifle from Dillon and started off as guide. The constable followed at the same rapid gait. He was an experienced snowshoe runner. Lilith tried to imitate their deft swinging stride with the webs. She tripped and plunged face-down into a drift.

Instead of turning back at the girl's cry of appeal, Garth quickened his stride to a run. A severe blizzard would thicken the skim ice and close the water lane out from the stream mouth. That would mean a wait until the stream ran dry with the freeze-up of the glacier. Not until then would the lake ice become thick enough for the cabin plane's pontoons to be chopped free and pried up on the surface.

Above the site of his old camp Garth halted and signed for his companion to listen. Down through the snowy stillness came a clear ring of metal on metal.

"They're drilling below the frost-line to blast a shaft," he said. "Richer gravel on bedrock, at the foot of the placer trough."

Dillon forged into the lead. "You'll trail me now, sir."

Without any protest, Garth fell in behind. The Law was now in command. A few strides brought them to the dyke of igneous rock that walled the lower end of the placer trough. From behind a stunted spruce, they peered across the treeless width of rock to where a large fire was flaming at the edge of the matted timberline scrub.

Over the fire hung three big iron kettles. Beside it stood a small cradle for rocking gravel. But there was no one working the rocker, nor was there anyone in sight. Even the ring of sledge on drill in the newly dug pit, just beyond the fire, had ceased.

"Not so good," Garth murmured. "I'm not so sure it's a surprise."

"You'll stay here, sir."

"No."

Constable Dillon spoke with cool logic: "If it's a surprise, I need no assistance. If he is warned and prepared to resist, better for you to support me from cover."

"Well—perhaps."

"The only way, sir. You stood responsible for bringing the young lady."

That clinched the argument against Garth. Having brought the willful girl with him, he now had to look out for her.

"Very well, Dillon," he agreed.

"Wait till I take position."

He shifted to the left side of the stunted spruce and crouched down where he could peer between the lower branches. At the other side, the constable stood up and stepped out into the open. Hardly was he clear of cover when a harsh shout came from the scrub beside the fire:

"Halt! Throw up your hands."

Garth caught the menace in Huxby's voice, and leveled his rifle. There was nothing of the four-flusher about the engineer. He was a coldblooded killer.

Constable Dillon paused. But he did not put up his hands. The Northwest police do not surrender. Dillon merely swung the barrel of his carbine backward under his arm, and made quiet reply:

"I have here a warrant for the arrest of Vivian Huxby for theft and assault to murder. Any persons who interfere with his arrest will make themselves liable."

"Bah, you cock-capped red jay, you can't bluff me," Huxby gibed. "You're covered. Move, and you get a bullet through you. Drop that gun and shove up your hands."

A sideward jumping down-throw would have put the constable back in cover. But he was a member of the Northwest mounted police. Retreat could no more be considered by him than surrender. Also, he had no authority to shoot his man. The warrant called only for the arrest of the accused. He had to do his duty at whatever risk.

"You will be well advised not to resist," he said.

With that, he raised his right snowshoe and slid it up a low cross-drift in a forward step. As he bent forward to bring up the other web, a rifle roared in the dense scrub.

Garth fired into the faint haze-puff of smokeless powder. Back came a bullet that clipped a branch at his left elbow. He shifted sideways towards the tree trunk, and rose to peer through a higher opening. A slight movement of a spruce spray in the scrub brought his rifle to his shoulder. He paused a moment to peer over the sights, his finger kissing the trigger.

Another twitch of that spruce twig. His finger tightened on the trigger—Crash! He hurled down on his right side. The first thought that flashed into his mind was that his rifle had burst. His right arm had gone numb as if broken by the shock.

Luckily, he did not at once try to spring up. As he paused to feel at the numb arm with his left hand, the bark flew from a limb close over his head. The scar of white wood showed that the bullet had been fired from off to his left.

He flattened down and crawled into the snowless hollow alongside the tree trunk. In the hollow lay his rifle. It had not burst. But that was no consolation. The first shot from off to the left had struck square against the side of the breech and smashed the magazine.

One look at the weapon showed that it was ruined. He wormed past it to the far side of the tree trunk. During all the many seconds that had passed since the firing of the first shot, he had heard no call nor any sound whatever from Constable Dillon. He peered under the low drooped spruce boughs on that side of the tree.

As he expected, the worst had happened. The policeman lay on his back. He had been shot through the heart. One glance told Garth the fact that his companion was beyond all aid.

He looked for the constable's carbine. It was nowhere in sight. The low drift behind which Dillon had fallen gave Garth enough cover to crawl out beside the body. But the carbine was not under its owner.

Garth pulled the snowshoes from the feet of the dead man. On the heel of one web he perched the constable's cap. He reached out sideways and lifted the cap so that it peeped above the top of the drift. The cap flipped back off the snowshoe, pierced through by a bullet from the scrub beside the fire.

At the roar of the shot, Garth bobbed up, three feet to the left, to look for the missing carbine. It lay half buried in the snow, a long 10 feet away. When shot, Dillon must have flung out his hands as he pitched over backwards. In the midst of the convulsive jerk, death had loosened his grip on the carbine.

Huxby had proved he could shoot a rifle with deadly accuracy, and his men were nearly as expert. To make a dash for the carbine would be equivalent to committing suicide. To lie quiet would give the killers time to realize there was no rifle waiting to meet their attack. The fourth man

JESUS' REPLY TO JOHN THE BAPTIST'S QUESTION

LESSON TEXT—Luke 7:19-28.
GOLDEN TEXT—I believe: help thou mine unbelief.—Mark 9:24.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Answers John's Question.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Answers John's Question.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Meeting Doubts With Facts.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How Jesus Answers Honest Doubts.

The title, "Jesus Helps a Doubter," given by the lesson committee, is not a good one. John was not a doubter, though somewhat perplexed. Jesus specifically defends him against such a charge (see Matt. 11:7-11 as well as the present text). It is to be hoped that no teacher will perpetuate this error. John was a great man. In announcing his birth the angel said, "He shall be great in the sight of the Lord." He was great, also, when measured by the standards of men. In teaching this lesson a survey should be made of John's life and work.

1. John's Birth and Ministry Foretold (Isa. 40:3; cf. Matt. 3:3).

He was thought about and his work planned long before he was born. He came as God's messenger.

11. John's Character.

1. Humble (Luke 3:4). He did not seek human praise and commendation, but shrank from them. His supreme concern was to proclaim Christ.

2. Courageous (Luke 3:7). He faced a great multitude and struck hard at their sins. He did not trim his message to suit the crowd.

111. John's Preaching (Luke 3:8-9).

1. He sounded forth a ringing call to repentance (vv. 3-6). Suddenly emerging from his seclusion, he came into the region of the Jordan as a messenger of God, calling upon the people to repent as a means of preparation for the coming of the Messiah.

2. He demanded proofs of penitence (vv. 7, 8). He insisted that their false prophets had to be abandoned, their sinful hearts had to be renovated, showing them that the vile passions of their souls must be uprooted. The turning of a soul from sin to God, was necessary.

IV. John Sent a Deputation to Jesus (Luke 7:19-23).

1. Their question (v. 19, 20). "Art thou he that should come? or look we for another?" Because John did not see the interval between the sufferings of Christ and the glory that should follow—between the cross of Christ and his second coming—he was perplexed; therefore, he sent a deputation to Jesus for light. This perplexity was not something culpable in John because the prophets did not see, or at least did not make clear, the interval between the crucifixion of Christ and his second coming. The Messiah, he knew, had to be the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world (John 1:29). The trend of events puzzled him. It was not a lack of faith, but confusion of mind, that prompted his inquiry. There were two lines of predictions concerning the Messiah; the one set him forth as the suffering One, as in Isaiah 53; the other as an invincible conqueror, as in Isaiah 63. Indeed, in Isaiah 60:1, 2 the two are joined together (Luke 4:17-20).

2. Jesus' action (v. 21). In that same hour, doubtless in the presence of John's disciples, Jesus cured many of their infirmities and plagues, and of evil spirits, and to many that were blind he gave sight.

3. Jesus' message to John (vv. 22, 23). Jesus said to them, "Go your way, and tell John what things ye have seen and heard."

V. Jesus' Defense of John (Luke 7:24-28).

1. He declared that John was not vacillating like a reed swayed by the wind (v. 24).

2. John was not doubting because of the hardship of prison life (v. 25).

3. John was not a mistaken prophet (vv. 25-28). He makes John equal to the greatest of the Old Testament prophets by declaring that among those born of women there hath not arisen a greater prophet than John.

4. The response of the people (v. 29). The people who heard this defense, even the publicans, accepted it as a vindication of John. They justified God. They not only accepted the vindication, but were baptized with the baptism of John.

VI. John's Martyrdom (Mark 6:14-29).

While John was in prison Herod had frequent interviews with him. John boldly told him that it was unlawful for him to have his brother's wife. He did not mince matters even with a king. This so enraged the licentious Herodias that she caused his death.

Love and Faith

As love is deepest in the being of God, so faith is the mightiest principle in the soul of man. Let us distinguish their several essences. Love is the essence of duty, faith is the essence of humanity which constitute it what it is.

Humility and Pride

Humility is the true proof of Christian virtues. Without it, we retain all our faults, and they are only hidden by pride, which conceals them from others, and often from ourselves.

Ellis Island Once Gay, and Named Oyster Island

In the days when New York was a Dutch possession and known as New Amsterdam—in the Seventeenth century—Ellis Island, the famous immigrant station, was called Oyster Island, and was a "gay and exclusive resort."

"For almost 150 years Oyster Island continued to be New Amsterdam's favorite resort for picnics, oyster roasts, clam bakes, and fishing parties," says Edward Corsi, former United States commissioner of immigration at Ellis Island in his valuable book "In the Shadow of Liberty: The Chronicle of Ellis Island." "It passed finally into the hands of Samuel Ellis, a farmer of Bergen county, New Jersey."

"It later became the property of the state of New York (how, not clear) and in 1808, New York ceded the island to the federal government. It was then used as a powder magazine and arsenal and after various uses by the government, in 1890, it was designated as an immigrant station."

Mr. Corsi notes that during his administration—in 1932—"I was to witness the actual changing of the tide, the first in more than a hundred years, when more people had left our shores than were arriving. The changing tide of immigration was brought about by the depression."

In that year—1932—35,576 persons were admitted, while 103,295 left. In 1928 the figures were: admitted, 307,255; left, 77,457.—Kansas City Star.

Nova Scotia Is Scottish

Nova Scotia, the land of Longfellow's "Evangeline" and popularly believed because of that poem to be largely French and English, is largely Scotch. The opening of Nova Scotia's parliament is accompanied by the skirl of bagpipes, and several newspapers are printed partly in Gaelic. In the Nova Scotian county of Inverness, 72 per cent of the inhabitants speak Gaelic, while less than half of the similarly named county in Scotland can speak that ancient tongue.

Latent Rabies

The length of time during which the virus of rabies may remain latent in the human body before manifesting itself is very remarkable, extreme instances showing a delay of a year. From 20 to 60 days is the usual period of time between the infection and the outbreak (incubation period).

IT WORKED FOR ME

Women should take only liquid laxatives

MORE people could feel fine, be fit and regular, if they would only follow the rule of doctors and hospitals in relieving constipation.

Never take any laxative that is harsh in action. Or one, the dose of which can't be exactly measured. Doctors know the danger if this rule is violated. They use liquid laxatives, and keep reducing the dose until the bowels need no help at all.

Reduced dosage is the secret of aiding Nature in restoring regularity. You must use a little less laxative each time, and that's why it should be a liquid like Syrup Pepsin.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if it doesn't give you absolute relief, if it isn't a joy and comfort in the way it overcomes biliousness due to constipation, your money back.

Uncommon Sense

One of the good things of life, which is also cheap, is knowledge.

Back farther than the beginning of recorded history men began collecting it for you.

By and by they began to store it away in books.

Books multiplied and became libraries.

There is hardly a subject today which has not been written about. Science, history, farming, business—all have been dealt with by competent men and women and placed within the reach of men, women and children.

Today there is no excuse whatever for ignorance.

Learn to read, and your way is mapped out for you.

If you cannot afford books of your own, you can get them out of libraries.

In the library buildings you will find trained men and women, who, when you tell them what you want to know, will tell you what books to read.

If you are not getting along well in your job because you only know its rudiments, all you need to do is to get hold of books that deal with it.

Moreover, you will find compendiums of information in your daily newspapers. Here within your easy reach is information about what the people of the world are doing, how they are doing it and why they are doing it.

No constant and intelligent reader of the daily press can remain ignorant of happenings in his own town and country or of world affairs.

By supplementing your newspaper reading with books which deal with world events you can become a well informed human being.

And today, if you are not an intelligent and a well informed human being you will stand little chance of earning any more than a bare living.

You are never justified in these times in saying that you haven't had a chance.

If you have health and ordinary intelligence, you will have just as much chance to make something out of your life as anybody else has.

It is true that some people are especially talented, but they are in a decided minority.

If you can get a college education, get it. It will help to head you in the right direction.

If you can't, don't feel badly about it.

Thousands of men and women have been self-educated, and today are among the leaders of thought and learning and benefactors of mankind.

As a child you think, in most matters, as your parents think.

By and by, when you begin to read books and magazines, in your thinking, you are prone to follow the men and women who write them.

"As the twig is bent, the tree's inclined."

But if everybody, since the beginning of time had used only borrowed thoughts, we should still be living in caves, and killing the creatures from whom we derived a large part of our food with stone hammers.

Learn all you can from other people, but don't be contented with what you learn from them.

No two people in the world are exactly in the same situation. Your problems are bound to be different, in a greater or less degree, from the problems of others.

You will discover, as you grow older, that many things which have been taken for granted for a long time are not true.

You find great men constantly changing their minds about all manner of things—religion, science and the possibilities of a greater and nobler development of human thought.

Don't let your own mind stagnate. Don't permit it to stick to ideas and theories just because they have been advanced by men of great reputations.

Read every well-known book that you can lay your hands on, and, after you have read it, sit back and ponder over what the writer has to say. Then form your own opinions.

As knowledge increases, we discover that the world is not made of green cheese, and that the opinions of many a supposedly learned man have been upset by a wider spread of knowledge. We eat foods today that were regarded as poisonous fifty years ago. Tomatoes, for example, used to be called love apples and regarded as dangerous to eat.

Later people ate them, but believed they were useless as food. Now they are recognized as a source of vitamins, and highly beneficial to the human system.

Use that mind of yours. Read and ponder what you read. Listen to people who are doing things in the world. Be one of them if you can. Knowledge cries out in the streets. If you do not heed it, but stick to the old ways, you cannot expect to be more than a lumberer of the earth.

Put that brain of yours to work and keep it at work, and you will get results that will please and astonish you.

SHIRTMAKER FROCK IS INDISPENSABLE

PATTERN 2507

A budget-wardrobe is a limited wardrobe, one in which each separate item must play more than one role. It's right for classroom and office, too, so includes both school and business girls among its wearers. So simple the veriest beginner could make it. Wool or wool-appearing cotton are excellent fabric ideas.

Pattern 2507 is available in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30 and 32. Size 16 takes 2 1/2 yards 54 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Goal Is Dependent Upon Style of Our Faculties

All I have seen teaches me to trust the Creator for all I have not seen. Whatever it be which the great Providence prepares for us, it must be something large and generous; and in the great style of his works.

The future must be up to the style of our faculties, of memory, of hope, of imagination, of reason.

Bernarr MacFadden Rep. Candidate For President

Among the number of candidates aspiring to the Republican nomination for President at the convention in Cleveland next June appears Bernarr MacFadden, well known publisher of Liberty, Physical Culture and many other publications.

Of Mr. MacFadden it can truly be said that he is a self-made man. Born of poor parents on a farm in Missouri, his early years were spent in work on the farm and in coal mines. Later, step by step, he became a bookkeeper, a printer and a lecturer, principally on physical health topics. He came to New York in 1893 with $50 in his pocket and from this small beginning created his immense publishing business, distributing now close to 15,000,000 copies of his various magazines every month. As the active head of twenty-five successful corporations he is proving his worth as a business man and executive—the kind of a man needed as the head of our government.

Bernarr MacFadden is a fighter with the courage of his convictions. He believes that now is the time to tear away insincerity, deceit and to trample on all enemies of our Government, of the Constitution and rights of citizenship.

Says MacFadden: "In a Democracy such as we have in this country we are allowed the privilege of owning property. The millions of home owners, in addition to the twenty millions of stock-holders in corporations, the forty million bank depositors, the sixty million insurance policy holders, would undoubtedly strenuously object to parting with the privilege of private ownership. That will be the stumbling block that the exponents of communism will find difficult to overcome in presenting communistic doctrines in this country." and "Capital cannot live without labor. In fact, capital is the product of labor. Every building, every business organization, every dollar in every bank is the product of human labor. . . . A prolonged fight between capital and labor can bring disaster not only to capital, but to every home in the land."

Will County Farm Bureau Annual Meeting

The 22nd annual meeting of the Will County Farm Bureau will be held at St. John's hall in Joliet on Saturday February 15. The morning session will begin promptly at 10 a. m., with music being furnished by one of the local musical organizations. The morning's program will include a talk by H. J. Schroeder, President of the Farm Bureau, who will be in charge of the meeting. Also during the morning will be reports of the officers, the delegates to the annual meeting of the Illinois Agricultural Association the directors of the organization and insurance, the Manager of the Service company and the Farm Adviser.

Mr. Geo. Metzger, field secretary for the Illinois Agricultural Association, has been secured to make the principal address of the day. Mr. Metzger is a speaker of outstanding ability and well known to the farmers of Will County. He will discuss the new farm program that is being developed to take the place of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, which was recently declared by the Supreme Court to be unconstitutional.

Every farmer of the county with his family is invited to hear Mr. Metzger on Saturday, February 15. There will be a lunch provided free to all those attending this meeting. Every effort is being made by the committee in charge to handle the largest crowd that has ever attended an annual meeting in the county. Wide spread interest in the developing agricultural situation is indicative to the committee that there will be an unusually large crowd to hear Mr. Metzger.

A novel addition to this year's program is a demonstration of folk games during the noon hour. This demonstration is to be conducted by recreation groups from Elwood, Manhattan and Peotone. An opportunity will be given as a part of this demonstration for every one to participate in the games.

Kuecker of Chicago president of the District, will call the opening session to order at 2 p. m. on Saturday. Opening ceremonies will include a welcome from the City of Elgin by Mayor Myron H. Lehman, as well as the appearance of other civic and church dignitaries.

ORLAND PARK

Due to the sub-zero and stormy weather Saturday afternoon and evening, the masquerade which the Orland Park Legion Post had planned to sponsor at the Goodings Grove hall that night had to be called off. At the village board meeting held Monday night the board considered the renting of the Felten building as a PWA office and quarters for the workers to eat their meals in while engaged in the street work project which has just been started.

Last Thursday the Orland Fire Department pumped a supply of water into the cistern in the home of Mrs. Harry Cox.

At the Child Welfare clinic held Monday afternoon in the Orland Park School auditorium, four children were registered which was considered a good showing for the cold weather.

Sherman Knox has received a letter from his parents located in Babson Park, Florida in which they state that the coldest weather in forty years is prevailing in their section of Florida. Frost has been frequent but not strong enough to kill the fruits and flowers. They also sent an interesting clipping from a Florida paper saying that for the second day in succession the St. Petersburg Evening Independent, which gives away the entire home edition when the sun fails to shine up to press time, was free Feb. 6th.

St. Petersburg experienced only 120 sunless days since publisher Lew B. Brown announced his "sunshine offer" more than 25 years ago. The last time two cloudy days came in succession was June 13 and 14, 1934, this being followed by 546 consecutive days of sunshine, a record broken on Friday, December 13, 1935.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—If ever there were a time other than when the nation was at war when money dominated the situation at Washington, it assuredly is now.

Money Dominates

One can go where he chooses about the government departments, to the White House or to Capitol Hill and the subject under discussion is or soon will be money.

A year or so ago, we heard a great deal about money. We heard of it in connection with an appropriation of $4,880,000,000—the greatest single peace-time voting of money in our history. And, likewise, we heard money discussed when the President used his power to devalue the dollar in its relation to gold.

Now, however, the subject of money is discussed in a slightly different vein. The question that is paramount is how can the government get the money it needs. In other words, we are now getting around to the question of taxation, and it is a question that neither the President nor his lieutenants in congress like to face. It is an election year and a tax increase in election year is not what the politicians would call smoothing the highway of a campaign.

Passage of the legislation providing immediate payment of the veterans' bonus brought conditions to a head. The President vetoed the bonus bill and congress promptly overrode that veto. So the President promptly told congress that something had to be done about it; that the only funds the treasury could muster would be by borrowing; and that since congress had yielded to the vocal minority represented by the greatest lobby ever to populate the Capitol, it thereby captured for itself a problem of raising the money.

Of course, the President must assume some responsibility even though he vetoed the bonus for the reason that some of the funds which must be raised will go to pay the crop control benefits or bonus resulting from invalidation of the processing taxes and the Agricultural Adjustment act. The President, as well as the political leaders in congress, want to continue that payment and they also want to pay farmers on commitments previously made because they regard them as moral obligation under the AAA contracts. Yet the country is likely to think in terms of the bonus for the war veterans and pay little attention to the smaller amount scheduled to go to the farmers and, indeed, the veterans' bonus is almost six times that which the administration desires to pay to the farmers.

There was in this situation a development to which I believe attention should be called.

"It's Up to Henry" Through many years congress has been an easy spender. Through the same years it has avoided at every turn laying taxes to offset the money it voted out of the treasury. Under the Roosevelt administration the peak of easy spending has been reached and congress has gone along with a vociferous "aye" on every spending proposal sent to the Capitol from the White House. The congressional attitude to which I have referred came up in bulk at the time of the bonus vote. Every time a bonus opponent inquired where the government would get the money to pay the two and one-half billion to the veterans, the answer from the bonus supporters was, in effect, "It's up to Henry."

I can recall a familiar slogan, current when I was a boy, that was used always when some one desired to shift responsibility—to pass the buck. It was "let George do it." In the bonus controversy, Senator Bankhead, Democrat of Alabama, was the first member of congress whom I heard say "it's up to Henry." He meant that the job of raising the money belonged to Henry Morgenthau, secretary of the treasury, but Senator Bankhead spoke more than his own feelings when he made the statement. He put into words a thought which permeated the minds of a vast majority of unthinking representatives and senators.

Perhaps I should not say unthinking because those men were, in truth, thinking very deeply. Their thoughts, instead of turning to song in the spring, were turning to votes in November. That was the reason for passage of the bonus. Senators and representatives seeking re-election were afraid to go into the battle for nomination and re-election this summer and have war veterans drag out the skeleton of a vote in opposition to immediate payment of the bonus.

It will be a long time before those who voted for the bonus can live it down. A keen political maneuver has something in it that calls for admiration but an obvious political maneuver such as was the passage of the bonus did not give any reason for commendation except, perhaps, the justification that if the Roosevelt administration was committed to passing out hundreds of millions of dollars on bonndogging and other more or less useless projects, then the war veterans were entitled to be paid now the sums which congress promised them would be paid in 1947. That really is a powerful argument but if Roosevelt supporters make that argument they are at the same time damning the New Deal spending policies, so I fancy that such an argument will be rarely advanced.

It is entirely probable that there will be no tax bill this year unless the President's letter to Speaker Byrns pointing out the necessity for raising revenue causes an unheard of number of senators and representatives to do a flip-flop. No imagination is required to see that a representative or senator is in a tough spot when he goes back home asking the suffrage of his constituents and must tell them at the same time that he added to the tax burden which they must pay.

Well, if that be true, how is "Henry" going to get the money? It will have to be borrowed and it will have to be borrowed on government bonds which add up into an increasing government deficit. It means that instead of a deficit of around three billions in the next fiscal year, the treasury will be confronted with a deficit of more than five billions and the public debt, in the meantime, will have been correspondingly increased. It means, in addition, that the banks of the country will have to pile more government bonds on top of the government bonds they have thus far absorbed in financing a policy of spending our way out of the depression.

The tragedy of the situation in congress that brought about Senator Bankhead's remark of "it's up to Henry" is that it indicates that congress has been looking upon the treasury as a source of revenue. It is not and it never has been. Government is non-productive. It can get funds only by taxation, by taking them away from the people—or by borrowing and if it borrows it has to pay back. In either event, new taxation must come and if congress doesn't have the nerve to pass tax legislation in this session, it must lay taxes in the next session.

The newspapers throughout the country have been full of reports concerning the early start of the political campaign. The Al Smith speech, coming from the man who made it, brought about a sudden expansion in the political fire. It really opened up the fight and henceforth we are due to be surprised with this claim or that, this charge and that denial or counter-charge, as the various leaders marshal their forces.

Thus far, in addition to President Roosevelt's Jackson day speech to the $50-a-plate diners and Mr. Smith's Liberty league dinner outburst, we have had active campaigning by former President Hoover, by Governor Tamm of Georgia, by Senator Borah, the Idaho Republican; by Governor Landon, the Kansas Republican, and by Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader in the senate, who spoke in reply to Mr. Smith. Others are in the offing for the Republican and Democratic national committees are engaging radio times in a big way.

As speeches and statements increase in number, and as fanfare grows louder, I find myself getting a bit callous to them all. I have been wondering whether the American people have lost their sense of humor completely, because the situation really has a humorous side. Unless the people's sense of humor has been dreadfully seared, it seems to me they ought to be highly amused over ridiculous statements now being made on one side of the fence or on the other. Take, for instance, Mr. Roosevelt's handwritten bonus veto message. It presented something a bit unusual because in my time in Washington it had happened only once before that a President vetoed a bill with a handwritten message to congress. Of course, it was intended to be dramatic—and it was. But the point is this: A year ago when congress passed the bonus the President made a personal appearance in the halls of congress and read his own veto message. He made his vigorous fight and he rallied his supporters in line to sustain his veto. There has been so much talk around Washington since the handwritten message went to congress that the President really was not vigorously opposing passage of the bill over his veto that I am coming to believe that was true. In other words, he thought that immediate payment of the bonus was wrong but he had a weather eye out for the forthcoming campaign and the votes the bonus might bring.

Then consider the activity of Senator Borah. I believe the Idaho senator is too smart to feel that he can be the Republican nominee against Mr. Roosevelt, but he is going through all manner of gyrations just the same. He has purposes and objectives in mind, obviously, but they are not the Republican Presidential nomination as he leads his various audiences to infer. It is to be recalled that Senator Borah has not at any time actually said he was a candidate. We have also the circumstance of Senator Robinson replying to Al Smith over the same radio and through substantially the same number of broadcasting stations.

The Illinois Society of Engineers celebrated its fiftieth anniversary at the annual meeting at the University of Illinois. The annual award, given for the most outstanding report made at the meeting of the previous year, was presented to William E. Stanley of Chicago.

The Highland Rifle and Pistol club has elected the following officers: President, Charles Haldi; vice president, William H. Evans; secretary, Mac Herbst; treasurer, William C. Winter; range officer, Herbert Bellm; captain of teams, William C. Buckheim; publicity officer, Richard Kessler.

John W. Linden, former state representative, for many years a political power in Aurora, died at his home in that city, after a long illness. He was seventy-seven years old. Mr. Linden was never defeated for public office. He retired after serving two terms in the general assembly and 18 years in the Aurora city council.

President Albert Britt of Knox college in Galesburg announced that he has presented his resignation to the board of trustees and that it has been accepted. Effective next June 30, he said, it is his intention to devote his time to personal interests and activities which the press of college work has compelled him to neglect for a number of years.

The acquisition of 18 letters written in English by Marquis de Lafayette to William Harris Crawford, early American statesman, was announced by officials of the University of Chicago libraries. The letters will be added to what already is the largest collection of material in any American university of the young Frenchman who placed himself and his wealth at the disposal of the American revolutionists.

Towering over his classmates, as he hopes same day to tower over a jury, Robert Wadlow, seventeen years old and eight feet four inches tall, was graduated from high school in Alton. The youthful giant, normal in every respect but size, made an imposing bulk with his 330 pounds at the commencement exercises. He plans to enter college this fall, to prepare for a career in law.

Mrs. Norma E. Fisher was awarded $4,500 at Rockford against Grant Mutimer for the death of her daughter. The girl was killed by Mutimer's son July 23, 1935. The jury held the elder Mutimer negligent in permitting his son undue liberty while the younger man was on probation from a state hospital for the insane. Young Mutimer killed the girl, then himself at the Fisher home.

Edgar County Coroner W. S. Jones ordered an inquest into the deaths of William A. Albers, fifty-four, his wife and their five children, found slain in their farm home near Sidell 25 miles southwest of Danville. A posse which recovered the bodies from the blazing house believed Albers, deranged because of worry over debts, shot and beat to death the members of his family, then fired the house and shot himself.

Ferdinand W. Scherer, sixty-two years old, cashier in the office of the United States District court clerk in Chicago for the last ten years, was arrested in his home on a federal warrant charging him with defrauding the government of $15,000 by making false entries on his books. Scherer was immediately arraigned before United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker and pleaded guilty to the charge. He was held to the federal grand jury in $5,000 bond and was taken to the county jail.

Judge Charles T. Allen of the County court of McHenry county died at the home of his brother, Dr. George Allen, in South Bend, Ind. Judge Allen, who was fifty-four years old underwent an operation for a nose ailment last November at the Mayo clinic in Rochester, Minn., and appeared to be recovering until he suffered a relapse. The judge was serving his third term on the McHenry county bench. He was first elected in 1926 and was re-elected in 1930 and 1934. His home was in Cary. He was president of the Cary State bank and also engaged in the real estate and insurance business.

Funeral services for Dr. Roland V. Turner, thirty-eight, Aurora physician, who died in Milwaukee, Wis., were held in the Wesley Methodist church, Aurora, with burial in Riverside cemetery. He is survived by his widow and two daughters.

Only one of 113 cities with populations of 5,000 or more in Illinois voted in favor of the New Deal in the Literary Digest national poll of sentiment, according to a tabulation made public by the magazine. The one pro-New Deal city, according to the poll, is Madison, population 7,061, on the Mississippi river near East St. Louis.

Constructive Suggestions or Complaints: Which Get Results?

There are two ways of accomplishing things which one has to get done. One is to complain that things are not as they should be. The other is to make constructive suggestions and request that they be followed out. The first method is apt to annoy the person conferred with. The second appeals to his sense of justice, and, if the suggestion is a good one and within reason, it is generally heeded. Assuming that, in both cases the thing gets done, in the first instance, annoyance prevails, while in the second, good will is fostered. You will remember the old adage that you can catch more flies with molasses than vinegar. In other words you can get more accomplished by keeping good tempered and sweet, than by getting annoyed and sour tempered.

Getting Things Accomplished.

It is well to remember these methods for family use, and for civic purposes. It does not mean that one can get things done merely by being good natured. There must be a plus to it. There must be continual effort in the right direction, until the point is won. And when there has been, no hard feeling created, and the matter is seen to, there is likely to be a feeling of satisfaction on the side of both parties, each being pleased that a good thing has resulted.

It was by the recommended method that a woman succeeded in getting a bench put on a waiting station platform. She appealed to the correct authorities, telling of the genuine need for such a bench, as tired persons found it almost more than they could endure to stand from ten to twenty minutes, more or less, according to the connection of one car with another at this junction. At first, came a note stating that her request had been noted, and formally thanking her for letting them know of her wish; nothing more, and nothing was done.

It was only after repeated appeals, and continued assertions that the company would be treating their patrons with consideration by putting the bench at the place suggested, that finally she succeeded. And now, not only are her own trips to the city made less tiresome, but hundreds of other persons daily find the seat a blessing.

Another instance comes to mind. Repeated accidents of major and minor severity occurred at a certain city corner, by autos colliding. A woman requested the city to install STOP BEFORE CROSSING signs by the curb at each corner of the cross street. Since her request was heeded, fewer catastrophes have occurred, and there need be none, if only motorists would heed them. She did not complain, but she made a good suggestion in a good way, and won her point to the comfort of all but the reckless.

A Grave Mistake for a Mother to Make

GIVING CHILD UNKNOWN REMEDIES WITHOUT ASKING DOCTOR FIRST

GIVING your child a medicine or remedy you don't know all about—without asking your family doctor first—is a bad risk for any mother to take.

Doctors and child authorities say health, and sometimes life itself, depends on this.

So—when you're offered a "bargain" in a remedy for your child; ask your doctor before you buy it. Do this for your child's sake and your own peace of mind.

Ask him particularly about the frequently used "milk of magnesia"—about Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. He will tell you that for over 60 years physicians have endorsed it as SAFE for your child. The kind of remedy you want your child to have.

Remember this when you buy, and say "Phillips' Milk of Magnesia" to your druggist. Comes now, also, in tablets that taste of peppermint, that children like to take.

Safety for You and Yours

NOW, ALSO IN TABLET FORM

You can assist others by refusing to accept a substitute for the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. Do this in the interest of yourself and your children—and in the interest of the public in general.

Mother Takes a Hand

OF COURSE, you know that children should never drink coffee. But do you realize that the caffeine in coffee disagrees with many grown-ups, too?

If you are bothered by headaches or indigestion, or find it difficult to sleep soundly... caffeine may be to blame.

Isn't it worth while to try Postum for 30 days? Postum contains no caffeine. It is simply whole wheat and bran, roasted and slightly sweetened. It is easy to make, and costs less than one-half cent a cup. It's a delicious drink, too... and may prove a real help. A product of General Foods.

The Permanent Wave Gland

A DISCOVERY that might easily save American women millions of dollars every year has been reported from Prospect, Conn., by Carl Louis Mortenson, artist and correspondent for the Waterbury (Conn.) Republican. According to Mr. Mortenson, Mrs. Lester Green of Prospect and her daughter have permanent waves that are the envy of the neighborhood.

It seems that Lester Green, while butchering, discovered a minute gland which produces a fluid responsible for the curl or kink in a pig's tail. This fluid, when extracted, diluted with water and rubbed on the hair produced a wave for Mrs. Green and his daughter that not only promises to have lasting qualities but also defies rain. In fact, shampooing only freshens it and makes it more potent.

Mr. Green visualizes great possibilities for this magic fluid. He believes that its greatest value will be demonstrated in manufacturing bed springs. He says that by immersing steel or brass wire in the solution it coils immediately into a spring and he predicts that his discovery may revolutionize the bed spring manufacturing business. So far he has not patented the process and anyone who wants to try it and make their own bed springs is welcome to do so.

The White Cliffs of Dover

"BACK in the days when we had iron men on wooden ships instead of wooden men on iron ships," said Cap'n John of Marblehead, "I signed on for my first cruise with Old Storm-along. A big feller the skipper was—just four fathoms and a compass width from the deck to the bridge of his nose.

"He had to be, of course, for his vessel, the Courser, was the biggest ship on the Atlantic. Why, I mind the day he sent a young feller aloft to push a cloud off the top of the mainmast . . . when he came down he was drippin' wet with somethin' white. 'Danged near drowned up there in the Milky Way . . .' he was sputterin'.

"But I was startin' to tell you about that time a storm drove us toward the English channel. Between Calais and the cliffs of Dover Old Storm-along took one squint ahead and yelled: 'Will she make it?'

"May scrape a bit of paint off'n her sides but I think she will," answered the man at the wheel.

"Can't have that!" roared Old Storm-along. "All hands over and soap the sides . . . put an extra heavy coat on the starboard."

"The next minute me and the rest of the crew was plasterin' the sides of the Courser with all the soap we had on board and she eased through without a bit of trouble. Of course, it was such a tight fit that the Dover cliffs scraped every bit of the soap off the starboard side. Ever since those cliffs have been pure white . . . that's our soap still clingin' to 'em. Sure it is! Next time you go through the channel take a look at the waves. They're still a bit foamy from that same soap!"

When You See a Wimpuss—

A WIMPUS, according to Austin Butcher, editor of the Altoona (Kan.) Tribune, is a rare animal which grows about as big as a hogleg, but it has a long tail like a collywop and wings like a bearcat. It lives in the top of high trees, whence it flies down to attack defenseless travelers. However, no harm is to be feared from a wimpuss if you know what to do when you see one coming.

It is folly to shoot at one, for a wimpuss catches bullets in its teeth and eats them. The only way to do when one comes at you is to take a piece of cheese, either Edam or Swiss, and tack it securely on a waterfowl. The wimpuss makes a swoop at the cheese and gets mixed up with the waterfowl and gets its feet wet.

It makes a wimpuss mad as all get-out when he gets his feet wet. So he hunts around for a nice piece of grass to dry them on. The minute the wimpuss lights on the grass, the hunter rushes at him and ties his tail in a double bow knot. When a wimpuss has his tail tied in a double bow knot he is gone, because when he flies he always ducks his head under his body to see who is following him. In doing this he gets his head caught in the double knot and chokes himself to death.

Hyde Park in London

In the reign of Henry VIII Hyde Park in London was a dense forest in which there were many wild boars. It is now London's most fashionable park. It is three miles in circumference and has an area of 361 acres. The level part, toward the Marble arch, is a favorite spot for public orators and is frequently used for mass-meetings. Rotten Row, in the park, is a horse-back ride of a mile and a half. Its name was originally Roughten's Rue, or street, and it was used by Lord Roughten and his friends as a bridle path. Kensington gardens, covering 250 acres, adjoin the park. Park lane, containing some of the finest mansions in London, runs alongside the park.

Moore of Philadelphia are watching the rangerettes. The ceremony was part of the Texas Centennial celebrations. Vice President Dallas also played an important part in the annexation of the Texas republic as a state.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THE HUNTING SEASON ENDS

THE very worst things come to an end at last. No matter how bad a thing is, it cannot last forever. So it was with the hunting season for Lightfoot the Deer. There came a day when the law once more protected all deer, a day when the hunters could no longer go searching for Lightfoot.

Usually there was great rejoicing among the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows when the hunting season ended and they knew that Lightfoot would be in no more danger until the next hunting season. But this year there was no rejoicing. You see, no one could find Lightfoot. The last seen of him was when he was running for his life with two hounds baying on his trail and the Green Forest filled with hunters watching for a chance to shoot him.

"I Tell You What It Is," Said Sammy Jay to Bobby Coon, "Something Has Happened to Lightfoot."

Sammy Jay had hunted everywhere through the Green Forest. Blacky the Crow, whose eyes are quite as sharp as those of Sammy Jay, had joined in the search. They had found no trace of Lightfoot. Paddy the Beaver said that for three days Lightfoot had not visited his pond for a drink. Billy Mink, who travels up and down the Laughing Brook, had looked for Lightfoot's footprints in the soft earth along the banks and had found only old ones. Jumper the Hare had visited Lightfoot's favorite eating places at night, but Lightfoot had not been in any of them.

"I tell you what it is," said Sammy

Jay to Bobby Coon, "something has happened to Lightfoot. Either those hounds caught him and killed him or he was shot by one of those hunters. The Green Forest will never be the same without him. I don't think I shall want to come over here very much. There isn't one of all the other people who live in the Green Forest who would be missed as Lightfoot will be."

Bobby Coon nodded. "That's true, Sammy," said he. "Without Lightfoot the Green Forest will never be the same. He never harmed anybody. Why those hunters should have been so anxious to kill one so beautiful is something I cannot understand. For that matter, I don't understand why they want to kill any of us. If they really needed us for food it would be a different matter, but they don't. Have you been up in the Old Pasture and asked Old Man Coyote if he has seen anything of Lightfoot?"

Sammy nodded. "I've been up there twice," said he. "Old Man Coyote has been lying very low during the days, but nights he has done a lot of traveling. You know, Old Man Coyote has a mighty good nose, but not once since the day those hounds chased Lightfoot has he found so much as a tiny whiff of Lightfoot's scent. I thought he might have found the place where Lightfoot was killed, but he hasn't, although he has looked for it. Well, the hunting season for Lightfoot is over, but I am afraid it has ended too late."

MOTHER'S
COOK BOOK

USING LEFTOVERS

PERHAPS a glance at what other cooks have done with the leftovers of feasts will help to use those that are daily problems in most homes. Chicken is the one meat that is not hard to serve in left-over dishes. A cupful will make a delightful salad mixed with tender celery, and less than a cupful, mixed with crumbs and seasoning, will stuff tomatoes or peppers. The following is a good recipe to keep on hand:

Stuffed Peppers.

Slice from the stem end of each pepper, making a cup, removing the seeds and white fiber. Parboil the peppers in boiling water five minutes, then drain and chill. For six peppers use the following: Two tablespoonfuls of minced onion cooked in three tablespoonfuls of oil, add one and one-half cupfuls of bread crumbs and one-fourth of a cupful of minced chicken. Season with salt and pepper and add one-half cupful of stock. Mix well, stuff the peppers, place them in a little water in gem pans to bake. Cover the tops with buttered crumbs and when they are well browned the peppers will be ready to serve.

White Sauce That's Different.

Take one and one-half tablespoonfuls of corn oil, one tablespoonful of minced onion, cook until yellow, add one tablespoonful of cornstarch, half a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper and a cupful of milk. Cook until smooth and thick and serve with any leftover vegetable.

Creamed Chicken.

Take two tablespoonfuls of olive oil or any vegetable oil, add a tablespoonful of minced onion, cook three minutes, add two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, stir until well blended, then add one and one-half cupfuls of top milk or thin cream, one teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth teaspoonful of nutmeg, a dash of cayenne and paprika. Add two cupfuls of minced chicken. Serve on toast or in bread cases. A dash of currant jelly is an improvement.

ROLY POLY GOLF BALL

THIS is a dinner table trick that will startle all who witness it. The feat is performed with an ordinary golf ball, which the magician places on the table.

Making mysterious passes, he causes the ball to roll along the tablecloth, traveling in a most uncanny fashion. Anyone may lift the ball and examine it.

The motive power is furnished by a strong thread that runs beneath the tablecloth. On the end of the thread is a small metal ring, which the tablecloth hides. It is upon this hidden ring that the wizard places the golf ball.

While his right hand makes its mystic passes, the magician uses his left to draw the thread, which makes the ball roll in a most natural fashion. The trick is made most effective by having a confederate pull the thread from the opposite side of the table. In this case the ball will roll away from the magician.

The Luxury of Crime

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THE taxbill's here (it comes each year along about this time). A bill for what? Well, quite a lot will go to pay for crime.

No goods we take, no laws we break, no evil path pursue.

We tote no guns—we're just the ones who pay for those who do.

We need no bail, police or jail, no courthouse on the square

Where men are tried, but those outside must pay for people there.

In cells they sit and do their bit and think it quite a chore,

And put away three meals a day that we are paying for.

We're just the great (in every state) majority of men

Who day and night live fairly right, without police or pen.

We need no laws or courts, because we never climb a wall—

We could go on from dawn to dawn without a law at all.

In mills we toil, or plow the soil, a living try to win,

Give little time to thoughts of crime—and then the bill comes in.

I sometimes think that those who wink at crime have failed to see,

To folks like us who labor thus, it's just a luxury.

Ensemble in Green

In this afternoon ensemble in green, a woolen swaggar coat with three-quarter-length sleeves edged with natural lynx is combined with a print silk crepe dress having an unusual scarf-like neckline.

"It might be wise for some collector to gather in the last few of our fast disappearing bathing suits," says caricature Sue, "as museum pieces they will serve to show the coming generation that we did have a sense of decency at one time."

Whale Can Be Drowned

A whale can be drowned if it cannot obtain oxygen; some species cannot remain under the surface for more than an hour at a time, while others, like the great orca whale, can remain submerged for 12 hours.

France Has a Plane Without Wings

WITHOUT wings and with propellers doing double duty, this new gyroplane presents an unusual sight indeed. The propellers not only act in windmill fashion to sustain the craft in the air, but they also propel it. The plane is equipped with a Hispano motor and was piloted by Maurice Claisse in extensive tests.

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

Where the Taxes Come From

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

"Taxes are paid in the sweat of every man who labors."

Congress, as this is written, is beginning to remember that profound truth—and to realize that the public remembers it, too.

Therein lies a headache—not only for Congress but for all other officers of government, whether national, state or local, who have spent the people's money at such amazing speed during recent years.

The trouble is that in proportion to public expenditures, there are fewer earnings for the tax-collectors to levy on than there were, let's say, a decade ago.

Recently - published figures have brought this fact dramatically to the taxpayer's attention. They show, for example, that whereas in 1929, taxes took one-eighth of the national income (which means the earnings of all the people), by 1932, they took one-sixth, and by 1935 more than one-fifth.

Or put it another way! In 1929, the average American labored one day out of every eight to pay the costs of national, state and local government; in 1932 he labored one day out of every six for the same purpose, and in 1935, one day (and a few hours over) out of every five.

Yet even that didn't meet the whole cost. If government last year had paid all its bills in cash, nearly one-third of all the money earned by the American people would have been required to balance the account. Instead, government borrowed, which means that the bill must be paid out of future earnings of the workers or their children—still in the sweat of the man who labors.

Today the politicians are searching feverishly for a method of producing taxes without the inevitable sweat. They find it a difficult job. Perhaps they are approaching it at the wrong end. If they want to make things easier for the people, who ultimately pay the bills, why not turn their thoughts to the problem of spending fewer billions, rather than to the question of how to collect more?

Tinley Garden Club News

Mrs. Werth, Mrs. Hug and Mrs. Baldwin attended lectures at the Palmer House on Tuesday, February 11.

Mrs. P. W. Dyers gave an interesting talk on the forth-coming flower show which will be held at the Pier.

Mrs. Helen Page Wodell talked on judging and exhibiting at the Flower show.

Mrs. Trudies Swisher who has been quite ill is much improved.

Don't forget the next Garden club meeting at Mrs. Nielsen's, Feb. 20.

Mrs. Omar C. Ebenhack attended the Women's Congress Thursday and Friday this week at the Palmer House. This is sponsored by the Chicago Tribune. Authorities of national and international reputation were its speakers.

Niagatri Girls News

The last meeting of the Niagatri Girls club was held at Mrs. Swisher's home on January 25. Plans were made for the year. We decided to do some one thing each month instead of one or two big things each year. For January we planned to donate a Sunday dinner to a needy family in Tinley Park.

For February we planned to have all of our members bring an article of food or clothing which is to be given away to a needy family in Tinley Park.

Please bring these donations to Mrs. Swisher's on February 29. The date of our next meeting.

We hope to see all of our members at our next meeting and hope you will be there to welcome our new members.

Gen. Butler Coming To Blue Island

Members of the American Legion, faculty members and students of all schools; ministers and heads of the professional and social clubs of this community have been invited to hear the speech of Major General Smedley D. Butler to be given at Whittier auditorium, Maple and Vermont streets, Blue Island on Tuesday night, February 18, at 8:15 p. m.

General Butler's only appearance in this part of the county has been arranged directly with him through personal conduct with friends who reside in Blue Island. He is coming to Blue Island under the auspices of the Lions club who are staging a great patriotic rally for the occasion coming as it does between the birthdays of Abraham Lincoln and George Washington.

Major General Butler's exploits in the Marine corps and in civil life since his retirement from the Service have been such to focus national attention upon the General. This coupled with the general's propensity of being unflinchingly outspoken whenever he felt the occasion warrants it has made him one of the outstanding platform favorites in the United States.

It is unusual for a community the size of Blue Island to obtain his appearance and all other communities in the vicinity are being invited to join with Blue Island in welcoming the General and in hearing his message.

Public Opinion Behind Farm Plan

Farmers who attended the annual meeting at Decatur came away encouraged that an effective program for maintaining parity prices for farm products is in the making, says the IAA in a statement received by the Will County Farm Bureau today.

There is now an evident spirit of unity and agreement among all partisan groups that a farm program must be worked out. Organized farmers see in this feeling an eventual realization of their dreams for a permanent plan that assures equal protection to agriculture against crop surpluses and ruinous crop levels of 1932.

The death of the AAA by a 6 to 3 vote has crystallized public opinion in support of a permanent policy for maintaining farm and national prosperity and has brought home the necessity of such a plan if recovery is to be complete. This opinion is based on the fact that the AAA was passed by an overwhelming non-partisan vote in both Houses of Congress.

Illinois farmers therefore believe that the new soil conservation plan being formulated at Washington will have similar support from the members of both major parties.

TINLEY PARK

The Gay Time Pinocle Club will hold their next meeting with Mrs. Theresa Schmutte.

A certain group of young married women are having a great time trying to get housework done and trying to play pinocle every day.

Mrs. R. Gonia entertained eight little guests in her home Monday in honor of her daughter's birthday anniversary. All had a nice time and all wished her many more happy returns.

The meeting of the Royal Neighbors of Tinley Park took place Tuesday evening with a good attendance considering the cold weather. Mrs. Anna Hopman the newly elected Oracle, called the meeting to order at 7:30 sharp and from all appearances this promises to be a busy year. A committee was appointed to look up and report on a play to be given around Easter, February 25 is our Social Evening so all members please be present.

A group of 14 with toboggans and skis went to Boyer's woods and enjoyed an evening of sport last Friday. It was enjoyed so much because the night wasn't very cold and the big full moon made it an ideal evening for the sport. After all had enough fun they walked over to the E. A. Moss home and enjoyed hot coffee and sandwiches.

Mrs. Wm. Funk who has been in poor health for some time, is not much improved.

Mrs. E. B. Campbell and Mrs. Omar C. Ebenhack attended the meeting Tuesday at the Palmer House at which Toyohiko Kagawa, Japan's foremost Christian evangelist was the speaker.

The Tinley Fire Department was called out Wednesday when fire broke out at the Morin place. Luckily the blaze was small and was put out before much damage resulted.

Henry Schreiber has returned to his home in Chicago after spending a few weeks in the hospital.

Theme for Sunday morning: "Should Christians Be Different?"

A generation ago there were certain very definite standards by which Christians could be distinguished from those who did not call themselves Christian. Undoubtedly those distinctions have largely disappeared. Have any new ones come in to take their place? Or should there be any difference? Probably all of us would answer in the affirmative. But what should be the difference? Here the answer is neither simple nor easy. In our worship service next Sunday we shall address ourselves to this theme. We shall use as resource material the Bible, the great hymns and poetry and prayers of the church, and evaluate them in the light of our own highest sense of values. You are urged to give the question your most serious thought this week, and then to share in our thinking next Sunday morning.

All persons in the Tinley Park area who do not worship elsewhere are invited to share our services. Your presence will do us good, and we may have something helpful to contribute to your life.

Plans are being made for an enjoyable evening in the form of an All-Church Party on the 19th of February. All persons who have any connection with the church or church school are invited, regardless of age. The parents of children in the church school are especially urged to attend with their children. Beginning at seven o'clock, we shall spend about two hours in playing together. This is a purely social evening, and we cannot urge too strongly that it is arranged for people of all ages. Games will be directed by Mr. Hastings, and the ladies of the church will serve light refreshments.

THE FLAG

The flag is flying in the breeze
Flying high above the trees
Waving out the sign of Liberty
Over all the seven seas.
Oh how beautiful it looks
With its red, white and blue
And what a victorious history it has
And the battles its gone through.
It went through the War of Independence
And also the Civil War
It won both of the terrible struggles

It is a flag we should adore.
The flag of the United States
Is an emblem of victory and strife
Many a brave and honorable man
For its cause they gave their life
We as Americans now living
Should respect and honor the flag
Keep it high and honorable
And never let it lag.
